

The South Carolina Council on the Holocaust and Facing History and Ourselves present

Civic Engagement and Choosing to Participate: Lessons from the Holocaust

In today's world, questions of how to best build and maintain democratic societies that are pluralistic, open, and resilient to violence are more relevant than ever.

DATE & TIME

Preparatory Modules: Online
Classroom Instruction: July 16-18, 2018

LOCATION

Columbia College, Columbia, SC

REGISTRATION

www.scholocaustcouncil.org

COST

$125 registration fee; $25 discount if paid by 4/1; Tuition, room, and meals supported by the Council

GRADUATE CREDIT

Participants receive 3 hours of graduate credit; also available to teachers who took the course prior to 2016

QUESTIONS

CBeresniova@SCHolocaustCouncil.org
803-351-0659

In today's global climate, the urgency of sustaining democratic societies that are pluralistic, open, and resilient to violence is more pressing than ever. Studying the Holocaust and human behavior allows students to wrestle with profound moral questions raised by this history while fostering their skills in ethical and moral reasoning, critical analysis, empathy, and civic engagement—all of which are critical habits of mind for sustaining democracy. In this workshop, which combines online learning modules and 2.5 days of classroom instruction, participants will use the fully revised, digital edition of Holocaust and Human Behavior to:

- Learn current scholarship on the history of the Holocaust and new research focused on human behavior, group dynamics, and bias
- Increase their ability to facilitate respectful classroom discussions on difficult issues such as racism, antisemitism, and other forms of exclusion in a way that invites personal reflection and critical analysis
- Engage with classroom-ready multimedia resources and learn how to build a customized unit that meets curriculum objectives
- Discover new teaching strategies that help students interrogate text, think critically, and discuss controversial issues respectfully

FACINGHISTORY.ORG
@facinghistory

South Carolina
Council on the Holocaust

